1. What is the role and place of the church in Livingstone in responding to the crisis of Identity?

1. Teaching Identity in Christ:
    - The church's primary role is to teach people about their identity in Christ, based on biblical teachings. This involves educating individuals about who they are in Christ, as the scripture provides a foundation for personal identity.
    - Many people know they are Christians but lack understanding of their mental faculties and human potential. Therefore, the church should focus on developing the whole person—spirit, soul, and body—according to God's Word.

2. Practical Examples from Leaders:
    - Leaders and pastors must exemplify the identity they teach. They should be role models for what it means to have an identity in Christ. If they preach about giving and loving, they must live it out.
    - Leadership should embody servant leadership, demonstrating Christ-like identity in their actions and interactions with their congregation.

3. Spiritual and Personal Growth:
    - The church should facilitate opportunities for spiritual and personal growth, encouraging leaders and congregants to seek mentorship and develop their identities in a holistic way.
    - Emphasis on the need for leaders to be accessible, approachable, and to genuinely connect with their congregants.

2. What are three practical steps that the church in Zambia can take in responding to the crisis of Identity?

1. Mentorship and Education:
    - Develop mentorship programs where experienced leaders mentor emerging leaders, fostering a culture of growth and learning.
    - Encourage pastors and leaders to read and learn, exposing themselves to new ideas and perspectives to better serve their congregations.

2. Networking and Collaboration:
    - Invite outside speakers and experts to motivate and educate the church on various aspects of identity and purpose.
    - Establish networks with other churches and organisations to share resources and knowledge, creating a well-rounded identity for the church community.

3. Model Servant Leadership:

    - Emphasise servant leadership, where leaders serve and guide their congregations with humility and openness, breaking down hierarchies that hinder growth and connection.
    - Leaders should demonstrate Christ's identity, being accessible and present in the lives of their congregation members, attending to their needs personally.

3. What are three practical steps that your church community can take in your response to the crisis of Identity?

1. Building Relationships:

    - Foster strong relationships between pastors and members, creating a family-like atmosphere where people feel valued and supported.
    - Encourage open communication and connection, making it easy for congregants to approach leaders with their struggles and challenges.

2. Community Engagement:

    - Actively engage with the community, reaching out to those in need and demonstrating the church's identity in Christ through service and support.
    - Use the church as a hub for healing, salvation, and identity formation, ensuring that everyone who enters feels a sense of purpose and belonging.

3. Holistic Identity Development:

    - Focus on the holistic development of individuals, addressing spiritual, emotional, and physical aspects of identity.
    - Provide opportunities for personal growth and understanding, encouraging members to discover their purpose and potential in Christ.

These responses from the participants highlight the importance of teaching identity in Christ, modelling servant leadership, and creating a supportive and connected church community. They emphasise the need for mentorship, education, and open communication as practical steps to address the crisis of identity in Livingstone and beyond.
